MEDIA RELEASE

19 August 2016

The Tasmanian Chapter of the Australian Institute of Architects (the Institute) has welcomed State Government efforts to engage fully with construction industry stakeholders in the development of legislative reforms to the industry.

“The Institute notes the formulation of a new Building Regulatory Framework, with the passage this week of a new Building Bill, an amended Occupational Licensing Bill and the Residential Building Work Contracts and Dispute Resolution Bill,” said the Institute’s Tasmanian President, Brad Wheeler.

“The Government’s initiatives to standardise and streamline regulation of the industry will facilitate change that reduces red tape for simple structures. We thank them for engaging with us and other stakeholders to develop the most appropriate legislation for all industry players.

“We look forward to working with the Government in the future on any issues affecting the industry.”
