A glassland rooted in the urban fabric

Rails with changeable modules to provide different functions

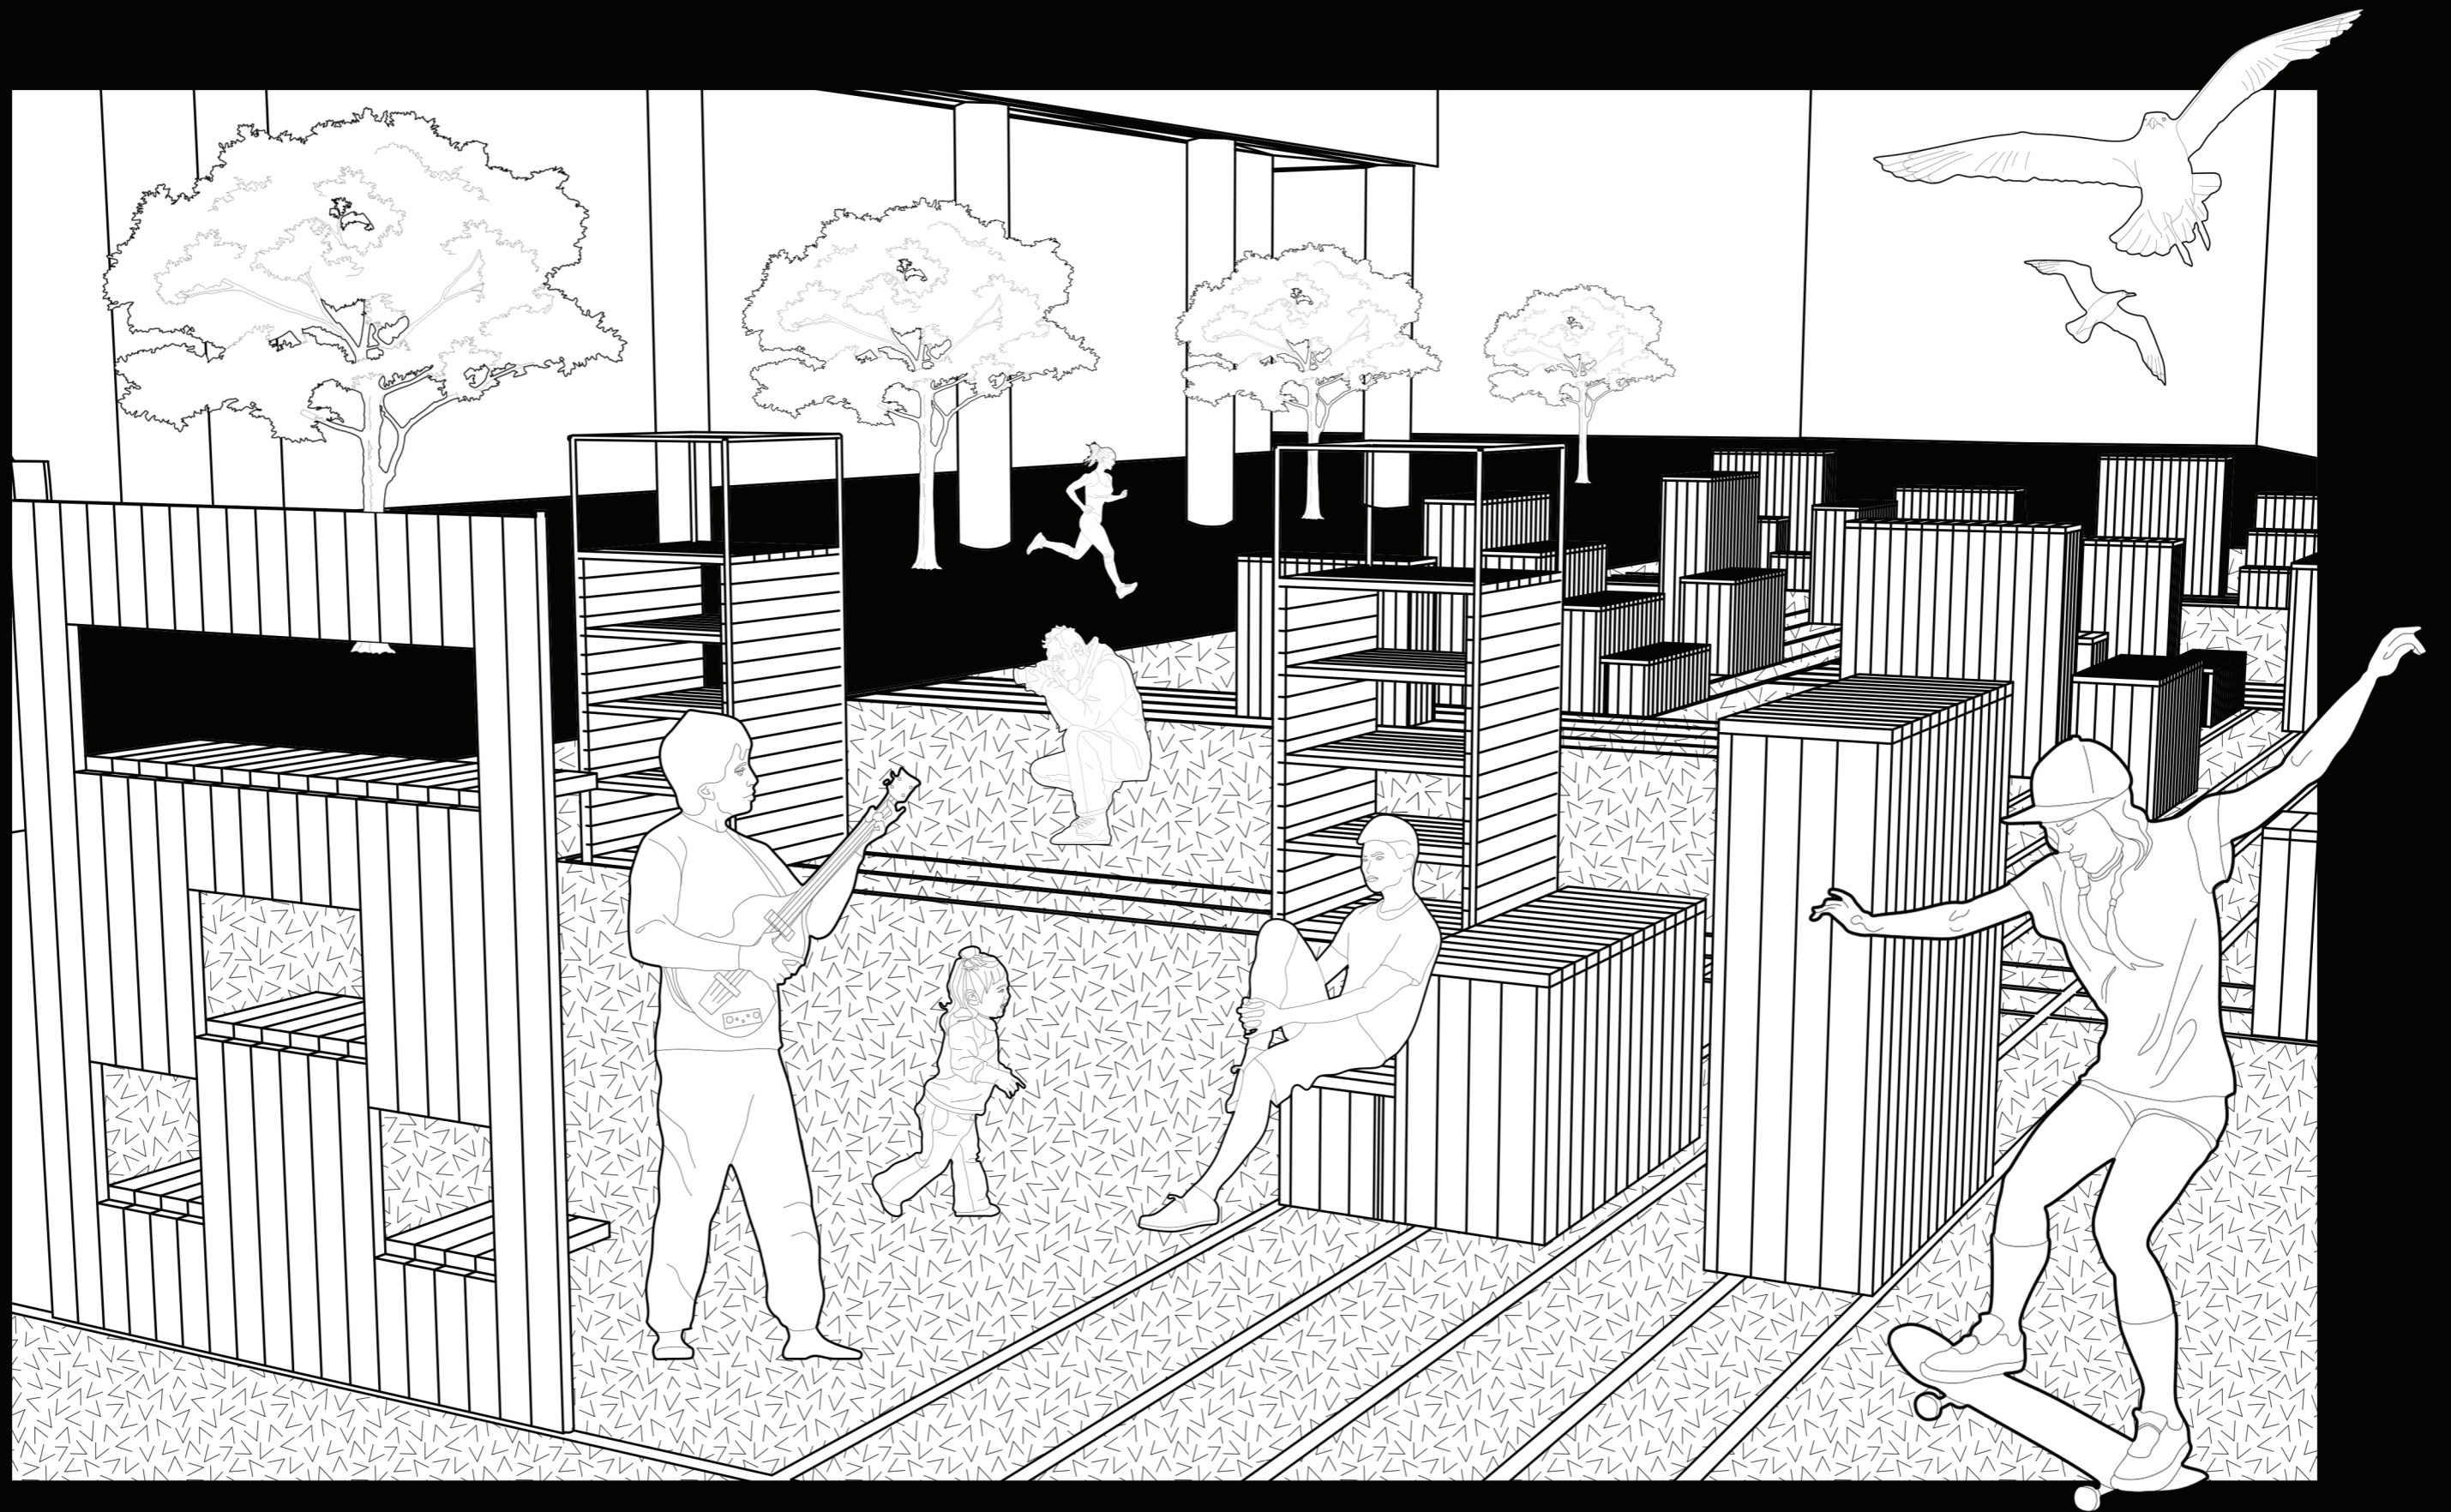

Community gathering incentivization through the location of the rails.

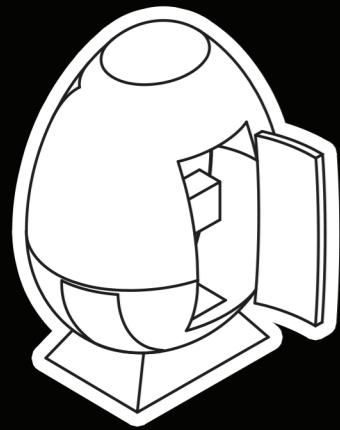

We have selected 'Cathedral Square' as our site, situated in the heart of Perth. This versatile venue combines arts, culture, and entertainment, offering a myriad of meaningful services. With its potential to facilitate strong connections among individuals and self-discovery, it holds the promise of becoming a thriving hub in the community. Our concept, 'Disconnect to Reconnect,' draws inspiration from the surrounding premises, targeting residents, students, employees, and passersby. Our designs offer various outdoor functions tailored to individual needs, aiming to create a vibrant community that enhances area publicity and fosters strong bonds among like-minded individuals.

'Disconnect to Reconnect' consists of two key approaches. Firstly, we offer the existing different communities of the Cathedral Square the opportunity to work together and take advantage of their resources to create a vibrant community. Secondly, we encourage individuals to disconnect from technology and the external world to practice self-awareness by offering individual capsuled space, during this process, individual may establish a more profound connection with society. The Cathedral Square is surrounded by a church, a library, an Art Museum, and a children school. However, all these organizations are working independently. Our project offers a system of rails and modules for people to establish marketplaces, organize fairs, host events, and create engaging conversation areas while maintaining order in this structured area. These rails also serve as bonding ribbons that bring cohesion to the surrounding organization and foster a thriving community.

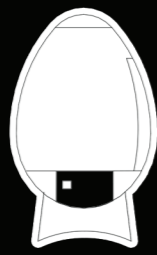

Egg has held symbolic significance both in art and religious contexts, representing "new beginnings or purity amidst the surrounding chaos." The egg-shaped capsule is soundproofing and has an embodied lounge chair for people to sit back and relax. The dome skylight allows individuals to star or cloud gaze, providing another means to reduce stress and practice mindfulness.

The combination of these elements presents a striking contrast and provides an unusual experience for individuals who wish to disconnect and find tranquility, or those seeking to connect with others amid today's fast-paced world.

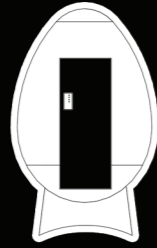

"SPHERE"

In order to spend time free from external stimuli, the locker allows you to securely storing your digital devices so that you can fully immerse yourself in self reflection, relaxation and purifying the mind.

The dome skyling atop of the egg shaped capsule provides a sky view while you sit back and relax. You can star or cloud gaze which provides a therapeutic means to unwind and alleviate stress.

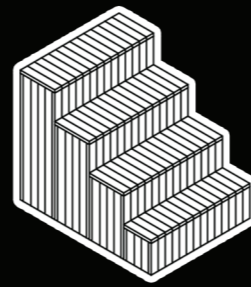

To access the Egg capsule, you need to download an app to register and apply for a membership card, which you can conveniently tap for entry. Through this process, you are able to select your preferred Egg location and booking sessions online, each session will not exceed a maximum of one hour.

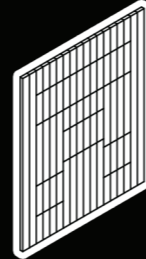

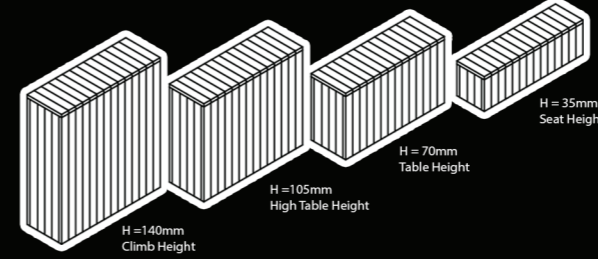

The embedded lounge chair provides a cozy space for individuals to unwind, gazing outside through a double-glazed tinted window. From this point, one can observe the dynamic surroundings in peace and relaxation. Importantly, the design ensures privacy, preventing outsiders from peering inside the lounge area.
